The English team at AQA recognises the importance of supporting schools in tracking students’ progress in Key Stage 3. We are therefore keen to make these pilot assessment papers available to you as an integral part of planning and preparation to teach our newly reformed GCSE English Language specification, for first teaching from 2015, and first assessment in 2017.

This paper has been co-designed alongside the GCSE paper. It assesses the same Assessment Objectives in the same sequence, and in similar ways to the assessment strategy set out in the GCSE paper. As a result, it has the following advantages:

- it will allow you to build familiarity in your students so that they are well practised in the skills needed to succeed at GCSE
- it will help you to become confident in the assessment sequence and how progression works across both papers
- it uses the same principles of mark scheme so that you can gain an insight into its design and application
- in that the same questions in the same sequence will assess the same AOs, you can gain precise and diagnostic evidence of students’ progress – in essence, key formative insights into how secure students are in their skills development.

Some notes about live pilot status:

This cover sheet sets out ways that you can provide us with feedback throughout the pilot stage of development. We are keen to hear from you about your experience, as well as the experience of students in taking the assessments. We appreciate that the paper can be used in flexible ways too, and so would like to hear about how you have integrated it into your curriculum provision.

We will take account of all the feedback provided when we develop the next set of papers. In order to clarify how outcomes of papers can provide secure summative reporting, we intend to set up an Assessment Panel to further establish thinking and policy in this area. The Panel will be made up of assessment experts and examiners from AQA, as well as be open to subject stakeholders and schools. Please indicate your interest to join this panel on the feedback sheet.

Specific notes about this Year 7 Paper 2
The choice of texts fits in with the intended length of extracts that will be used in GCSE papers, though these are intended to be on a topic and theme that will enable readers in Year 7 to achieve appropriately.

We have looked to provide sufficient support for these to work as unseen extracts, for example, by setting out an explanation at the start and through some detailed notes as a glossary.

The texts are 21st Century non-fiction (Journalism) and 19th Century literary non-fiction (a report). In a GCSE live series, this would mean that the source text on Paper 1 would be 20th Century fiction to meet the requirements of DfE criteria. You will note from the text used on Paper 1 that we have not stuck to this for this first pilot paper. In future KS3 papers however, we will observe the same strict time period criteria and required combinations.

In that this Year 7 Paper is likely to be an early introduction to the AOs and assessment strategy, we have looked to maintain the integrity of the GCSE sequence and weighting of assessment, but provided additional support – either breaking down assessments into more manageable chunks, or providing additional scaffold to support students' responses for example, the grid on question 4. This is a key aspect of progression through the papers in the KS3 suite.
